

Lihi Turjeman (1985)

Lives and work between Tel-Aviv and Turin

On floors and ceilings, within and behind walls, Lihi Turjeman's large-scale installations penetrate layers of lime and plaster, geography and history. Through intense labor, digging through walls, mixing materials and transferring layers of paint, she maps territories and reveals layers of personal and public history, at times hidden from the eye. In a constant search for built and imagined architectures, past histories and current narratives, the source, the center and the center of gravity, she documents constant decay, urban, social and human.
